DESCRIPTION

Oculoplastics is a multi-faceted field that is constantly evolving. The periocular region may be affected by acquired conditions, including trauma, infection, malignancy, and anophthalmia, as well as systemic disease, such as thyroid associated orbitopathy. Understanding new developments in the field is essential to providing optimal care of patients with disorders of the eyelids, lacrimal system and orbit, which can have serious ophthalmic consequences and may confer morbidity both locally and systemically. Experts in the field will discuss the pathophysiology and optimal management of eyelid, lacrimal system and orbital disease, along with a panel discussion of periocular reconstruction techniques.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This activity is intended for comprehensive ophthalmologists, optometrists, pediatric ophthalmologists, ophthalmology residents and fellows, primary care physicians, otolaryngologists, otolaryngology residents and fellows, facial plastic surgeons and fellows, plastic surgeons, plastic surgery residents and fellows.

Accreditation Statement

The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

Credit Designation Statement

The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine designates this live activity for a maximum of 8.75 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

OBJECTIVES

After attending this activity, the participant will demonstrate the ability to:

- Describe the current management of various forms of periocular trauma, including eyelid and orbital reconstruction.
- Identify different periocular tumors and discuss their treatment.
- Compare and contrast different methods of managing exposure keratopathy.
- Describe changes in the eyelids and orbit that are associated with glaucoma treatment.
- Discuss the causes and management of tearing.
- Describe the advantages and disadvantages of various orbital imaging modalities.
- Outline current medical and surgical management of orbital inflammatory disease including thyroid associated orbitopathy.
- Identify and discuss the management of periocular infections.
- Identify issues in management of the anophthalmic socket.
- Describe various techniques used for periocular rejuvenation.

Policy on Speaker and Provider Disclosure

It is the policy of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine that the speaker and provider globally disclose conflicts of interest. The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine OCME has established policies in place that will identify and resolve all conflicts of interest prior to this educational activity. Detailed disclosure will be made in the instructional materials.
