

The Tenth Biennial
Johns Hopkins
 Breast Cancer Conference
 A Multidisciplinary Perspective

A Virtual Online Learning Experience
October 2, 2020 | 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Presented by

Johns Hopkins Breast Cancer Program
 Johns Hopkins Kimmel Cancer Center

This activity has been approved for AMA PRA Category I Credits™.

DESCRIPTION

Since our last conference, the diagnosis, treatment and overall care needs of breast cancer patients have become more complex. This is due to innovative improvements in therapies, better screening processes, and multidisciplinary care models developing across the U.S. The indications for axillary node dissection continue to change. Immunotherapy with immune checkpoint blockade is achieving startling results in some patients. There are more options for molecular profiling of tumors, as well as more choices about systemic therapies and radiation therapy.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This activity is intended for radiologists, pathologists, surgeons, medical and radiation oncologists, nurses, nurse practitioners, physician assistants and other professionals involved in prevention, screening, diagnosis and management of breast cancer.

OBJECTIVES

After attending this activity, the learner will demonstrate the ability to:

- Describe new data and discuss ongoing controversies in the management of breast cancer.
- Apply evolving data to individualizing breast cancer management.
- Identify areas of controversy in neoadjuvant treatment of breast cancer.
