This activity has been approved for AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™.

JOHNS HOPKINS
MEDICINE

DESCRIPTION

The goal of the educational activity is to increase knowledge among primary care providers in the management of patients with atopic dermatitis (AD), with a focus on improved diagnosis and treatment in line with the latest therapies. This activity will identify knowledge gaps in the primary care community in the management of AD involving both adults and children. The content for this educational activity will address these gaps, with the input of both allergy and dermatology AD experts on our program faculty through a series didactic lectures, pre and post activity performance on knowledge assessments and case presentations.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This activity is intended for pediatricians, internists, primary care providers, as well as physician assistants and nurse practitioners in these specialties.

OBJECTIVES

After attending this activity, the learner will demonstrate the ability to:

- Recognize and diagnose atopic dermatitis.
- Identify and apply improvements in healthcare providers knowledge of the efficacy of the latest topical and systemic therapies and safety issues for atopic dermatitis, including steroid-sparing topical agents and emerging biological therapies.
- Create an easy-to-access enduring and reliable source of information for health care providers across disciplines and patients for the overall care management of patients with atopic dermatitis.
- Outline advances in health care provider knowledge on the impact of atopic dermatitis on psychosocial issues and quality of life.
