Description

The 17th Annual Gastroenterology and Hepatology: Viva la Vida will provide, through formal lectures, questions and answer sessions, as well as audience interactive systems, including interactive endoscopic cases from The Johns Hopkins Hospital, presentations of various gastrointestinal and liver disorders that will be of interest to practitioners in the field. This year, the conference will focus on common clinical challenges faced by practitioners with a special session on "How To Endoscopy", "Hands-On Techniques" and "GI Mysteries," which will focus on tips and tricks by Johns Hopkins experts using endoscopic techniques in challenging cases. Many GI disorders have controversial approaches. A special session on these hot topics will be debated by Johns Hopkins faculty. Course attendees will be updated in a series of symposia to include modern approaches to patients with IBD, fatty liver disease, commonly known as NAFLD, pancreatitis, sphincter dysfunction and hot new and emerging topics including eosinophilic esophagitis, intestinal perforations, submucosal endoscopy and recent advances in Hepatitis C treatment.

Who Should Attend

This activity is intended for gastroenterologists, hepatologists, surgeons, fellows, residents, physician assistants, nurses, nurse practitioners, and allied health professionals who are interested in gastroenterology and hepatology. A special session on Thursday will be devoted to nurses and nurse practitioners.

Objectives

After attending this activity, the participant will demonstrate the ability to:

- Describe recent advances in inflammatory bowel disease including the role of surgery and the detection of cancer in these patients.
- Discuss new medical and surgical advances in treating liver disease, including pregnant patients.
- Discuss recent developments in the management of pancreatic disease, including pancreatic cysts, pancreatitis and pancreatic cancer.
